5 THINGS TO KNOW

WELCOME TO METRO BOSTON

MATT BURKE, SPORTS EDITOR

With apologies to the Brewers, we have the World Series match-up most everyone — especially the Fox network — wanted. Two of the most historically rich franchises in sports, the Red Sox and Dodgers, will clash for the right to call themselves the 2018 champions of baseball. The Sox and Dodgers met once before in the World Series, back in 1916. Back then the Dodgers were called the Robins, and they played in Brooklyn. Some dude named Babe Ruth pitched 13 shutout innings in Game 2 for the Red Sox as they won that game, and the series.

1 HONDURANS IN MIGRANT CARAVAN REACH MEXICO

Defying the efforts of four governments to break them up, thousands of mostly Honduran migrants rose at dawn on Sunday from the shores of a river between Guatemala and Mexico and continued their trek northward. But even as the U.S.-bound caravan moved into Mexico, Mexican police in riot gear were deployed at highway junctions, as a military helicopter circled overhead, prompting many migrants to wonder if police will make mass arrests and seek to turn the caravan back. The migrants pose a challenge to Mexican President Enrique Pena Nieto's promise late last week to stop the travelers' plans to press ahead to the U.S. border without the proper documents. Many of the bedraggled travelers of the swollen caravan appeared determined to keep moving, saying they are fleeing a toxic mix of violence, poverty and endemic corruption and would not turn back. "We're going to make it, we're going to keep moving so long as they don't stop us," said Honduran Jaffe Borjas, 17, marching alongside a childhood friend at the head of the giant column that stretched far down the highway to the horizon.

2 SAUDI ARABIA: KHASHOGGI KILLING 'GRAVE MISTAKE'

Saudi Arabia on Sunday called the killing of journalist Jamal Khashoggi at its Istanbul consulate a "huge and grave mistake," but sought to shield its powerful crown prince from the widening crisis, saying Mohammed bin Salman had not been aware. The comments from Foreign Minister Adel al-Jubeir were some of the most direct yet from Riyadh, which has given multiple and conflicting accounts about Khashoggi's killing on Oct. 2, first denying his death before admitting it on Saturday amid an international outcry. The kingdom's weeks of denial and lack of credible evidence in the face of allegations from Turkish officials that Khashoggi had been killed have shaken global confidence in ties with the world's top oil exporter, Western governments say. U.S. Treasury Secretary Stephen Mnuchin said on Sunday that Saudi Arabia's admission that the Washington Post columnist had been killed in a fistfight was a "good first step but not enough," though he added it was premature to discuss any sanctions against Riyadh.

3 SHEEP INVADE MADRID DURING CELEBRATION OF SEASONAL LIVESTOCK MIGRATION

Sheep are mustered along the streets of Madrid's city center during the 25th anniversary of the livestock migration festival on Sunday in Madrid, Spain. The Transhumance Festival has taken place since 1994 in the Spanish capital to promote the conservation of the ancient paths of livestock transhumance. Livestock transhumance is a millenary tradition for herders to find better weather conditions and natural pasture during winter and summer for their animals. Transhumance also helps to preserve natural landscapes and conserves biodiversity.

4 'DEADLIEST' TAIWAN TRAIN CRASH KILLS 18

Eighteen people died and 175 were injured when a train derailed in northeastern Taiwan on Sunday, authorities said, in the island's worst rail disaster in more than three decades. Four carriages overturned in the crash, which occurred in Yilan County near the coast on a line popular among tourists when all eight cars ran off the tracks on a bend near a station, officials said. It was unclear what caused the crash. As of 9:35 p.m., all 366 passengers onboard — including the dead and injured — had been evacuated or removed from the wreckage, the Taiwan Railways Administration said. "The train was going very fast. I thought to myself: Why was it not slowing down on a curve?" 30-year-old Henry Tseng, who was onboard one of the overturned carriages and suffered eye injuries, told Reuters. "I hit a wall when the car started to flip. Around five to six people were thrown out of the carriage door... There's no time to think what happened. Everyone was in a rush to get out," he added. Hundreds of rescuers and military personnel worked through the wreckage with spotlights on Sunday night in search of survivors.

5 EARLY VOTING BEGINS MONDAY IN BOSTON

Early voting in Boston will begin Monday, and run through Friday, Nov. 2, giving residents a chance to cast their votes ahead of the Nov. 6 state election.

Early voting in Boston was unanimously approved for the 2018 election by the Boston Election Commission Board in July. Any voter registered in Boston can cast their ballot early at any early-voting location. Unlike with absentee voting, you don't need to explain why you want to vote early, and you vote in person. You must be registered to vote at least 20 days before an election in Massachusetts. City Hall will serve as the main location for early voting in Boston.

It will be open for voting Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. during the designated two-week period. On Tuesdays and Thursdays, City Hall will stay open later, until 8 p.m., for those who want to vote early. Pop-up polling locations will also be available throughout the city on Tuesdays and Thursdays during the early-voting period and will be open from noon to 8 p.m. KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

Spectators brave chill to watch Head of the Charles Regatta

The two-day event drew thousands to the banks of the Charles River.

SARAH LUOMA

Energy and excitement were in the air at the Head of the Charles Regatta in Boston over the weekend. More than 800 rowing teams from all over the world came to compete with the hopes of being first to beat all the others.

The course is three miles long and takes skill and strategy for rowers who must make their way under six bridges to make it to the finish line near Christian Herter Park.

Thousands of onlookers congregated on the sides of the Charles River on both Saturday and Sunday, cheering and holding signs of encouragement to celebrate the 54th annual fall event.

"It's really early in the year, and so it gets a lot of fanfare because it is a very visible event. It is the premier event of the fall, lots of spectators. So it gets a lot of excitement, but it is not that relevant come spring," Harvard coach Bill Boyce shared about the regatta.

While the weather cooperated for a rain-free two days, it was a cool and breezy weekend, with rowers working against the wind in choppy waters.

On both days the race began at 7:45 a.m., ending just before 5 p.m. In between watching the races, spectators attended sponsored events that lined the Charles River from Cambridge to Boston, enjoying camaraderie, food, drink and more.

"It is the premier event of the fall, lots of spectators. So it gets a lot of excitement, but it is not that relevant come spring."

Walsh announces 'last mile' scholarship to help Boston college students

The scholarship will aid students who are financially struggling to complete their college education.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Mayor Marty Walsh aims to help financially struggling college students who are close to graduation cross the finish line with the launch of a "last mile" college scholarship.

The Graduate Ready To Achieve Degree (GRAD) Last Mile Scholarship will award a maximum of $2,500 to students at five Boston colleges: Bunker Hill Community College, MassBay Community College, Roxbury Community College, Benjamin Franklin Institute of Technology and UMass Boston.

$2.5K

The Graduate Ready To Achieve Degree (GRAD) Last Mile Scholarship will award a maximum of $2,500 to students at five Boston colleges.

The program is in partnership with the Frieze Family Foundation, a donor-advised fund of the Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Greater Boston. The Foundation will fund the pilot year of the GRAD Last Mile scholarship.

The college scholarship will be a resource, the city said, for students whose financial hardships are an obstacle to completing their higher education, despite being so close to receiving their degree.

This last mile problem is an issue for college students across the country. Nearly one in five students who leave college without a degree actually complete 75 percent or more of the necessary credits to get a degree, according to a Spring 2018 analysis from Civitas Learning. One in 10 dropouts reach at least 90 percent of the credit threshold.

These students drop out for a range of reasons, but top among them is not having enough financial aid.

Thirty-nine percent of college students say they would consider dropping out to avoid taking on more debt, according to a survey by MagnifyMoney.

"The GRAD Last Mile Fund will enable more Boston students to realize their dream of graduating from college," Walsh said in a statement. "Financial hardship should not prevent any student from completing the 'last mile' on their journey toward earning a college degree, and I am proud that through this new fund, we will be able to help more students cross the finish line and earn their degree."

Taressa Jones, a senior at UMass Boston, is one GRAD Last Mile Scholarship recipient. She said in a statement that the award will cover her transportation and books as well as allow her to take time off of work in order to study for exams.

"At UMass Boston, we have a number of students who are very close to completing their degrees but experience insurmountable financial challenges such as food and housing insecurity, family medical issues, childcare, and employment challenges that make it impossible for them to finish," Joan Becker, vice provost for academic support services at the University of Massachusetts Boston, said in a statement. "The GRAD Last Mile Scholarship will make it possible for these students to walk across the stage with their degree proudly in hand."

5 Fun things to do this week

Seeing a rockin' show, enjoy dollar dumplings and more. MATT JUUL

Need some ideas for making your work week a bit more fun? Don't worry, we've got you covered. From rocking musicals to dumpling deals, here are the best things to do in Boston this week.

"The Silence of the Lambs" seminar

Halloween is right around the corner, which means it's the perfect time of year to revisit this horror thriller. Head to the Coolidge Corner Theatre for a special presentation of "The Silence of the Lambs." Thomas G. Gutheil, MD, a professor of psychiatry at Harvard Medical School, will be on hand to break down the psychology behind the Oscar-winning classic. Oct. 22, 6:15 p.m., Coolidge Corner Theatre, 290 Harvard St., Brookline, $22+, coolidge.org

Dollar dumplings

If you're a big dumpling fan, then you have to take a trip over to Tiki Rock this week. The local hotspot runs a dollar dumplings special every Tuesday, so fill up while sipping on some tasty tiki cocktails. DJ Zati will also be there spinning some funky beats. Oct. 23, Tiki Rock, 2 Broad St., tikirock.com

Christopher Kimball comes to Boston.

"Rock of Ages"

Get ready to rock like it's 1985, Boston. The hit musical is back in town as part of its 10th anniversary tour. See "Rock of Ages" when it takes over the Wang Theatre for a limited engagement, beginning Wednesday. Oct. 24-28, Wang Theatre, 270 Tremont St., $25+, bochcenter.org

Charlamagne Tha God

So his chat in the Big Apple with Kanye West about mental health might be canceled, but you can still catch the "Breakfast Club" radio host when he ships up to Boston this week. Charlamagne Tha God will talk about overcoming anxiety and more when he takes over The Wilbur as part of his "Shook One" tour on Wednesday night. Oct. 24, 7 p.m., The Wilbur, 246 Tremont St., $37+, thewilbur.com

Christopher Kimball

Get ready, foodies, because the culinary star and Milk Street founder is coming to Cambridge this week. Christopher Kimball will bring a special presentation of his new cookbook "Milk Street: Tuesday Nights" at the Brattle Theatre on Thursday. Oct. 25, 6 p.m., Brattle Theatre, 40 Brattle St., Cambridge, $6+, harvard.com

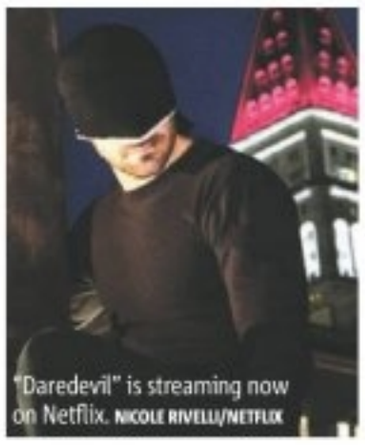
'Daredevil' star on introducing iconic villain for season 3

Every superhero has an archenemy. Batman has the Joker. Captain American has the Red Skull. Superman has Lex Luthor. When it comes to Daredevil, Matt Murdock's longtime comic-book foe is the deadly Bullseye.

Marvel fans should be giddy about "Daredevil" season 3, then, as the hit Netflix series will introduce the iconic baddie this year, played by Wilson Bethel. According to the man behind the Daredevil mask, Charlie Cox, the new season will serve as a bit of an origin story for Bullseye, who's set to cause some havoc under the direction of Vincent D'Onofrio's Wilson Fisk, a.k.a. the Kingpin.

We caught up with Cox to chat about "Daredevil" season 3, his new nemesis, and more.

Matt Murdock was on the verge of death after "The Defenders." Where do we find him at the start of season 3?



"Daredevil" is streaming now on Netflix. NICOLE RIVELLI/NETFLIX

We kind of inherited where we were going to start off based on everything that happened in "The Defenders." What Erik [Oleson], the new showrunner, decided to do was really embrace that and kind of go fully into the level of Matt's brokenness. What we discover early on in season 3 is he's obviously very physically broken because he had a building fall on him. What ends up being a little bit more interesting, I hope, is he's kind of emotionally and spiritually broken in a way that we haven't seen him before.

Season 3 also introduces a new villain, the iconic Bullseye. How would you describe his introduction to the series?

This is kind of a Bullseye origin story. It's up for grabs when he becomes Bullseye, in the same way season 1 was a Daredevil origin story and you could kind of decide when he deserved to earn that title. In terms of their relationship, initially at least, Bullseye — or this Agent Poindexter, as he's known — is really just a weapon of Fisk's. He's a tool that Fisk uses to his advantage and is a barrier Daredevil has to go through to get to Fisk. What, of course, is going to become apparent toward the end of the season is that he is of himself a worthy adversary and someone who's going to require a personal level of detail in order to overcome. We get to see the beginning of that iconic relationship develop. MATT JUUL

Beautiful Boy" is now in theaters. ALL PHOTOS BY FRANCOIS DUHAMEL / AMAZON STUDIOS

"It's terrifying to see what's happening across the country."

MATT JUUL
matthew.juul@metro.us

One of the leading contenders this Oscar season will no doubt be "Beautiful Boy," a gut-wrenching drama about drug addiction starring Timothée Chalamet and Steve Carell.

The film is based on a pair of memoirs, "Beautiful Boy: A Father's Journey Through His Son's Addiction" by journalist and author David Sheff (played by Carell), as well as "Tweak: Growing Up on Methamphetamines" by David's son Nic (played by Chalamet), a recovering meth addict. The drama doesn't shy away from showing just how complicated addiction and the recovery process can be, as well as the financial and mental toll it takes on the family members who try to support a loved one struggling with the disease.

"Beautiful Boy" is a particularly timely film: Drug overdoses killed a record 72,000 Americans last year, and drugs are the leading cause of death for Americans under the age of 50. While substance abuse is a nationwide issue, it's a topic that's especially relevant to Carell's home state of Massachusetts, which has one of the highest rates of opioid-related overdose deaths in the country.

During a red carpet event for "Beautiful Boy" in Boston on Thursday, Carell told Metro that he felt it was important to show the film in the Bay State due to its struggles with the opioid crisis. The actor also praised Sen. Ed Markey, who also attended the screening, for his efforts in leading the charge on the issue.

"I have to applaud Sen. Markey for rallying behind this," Carell said. "I know the opioid crisis is one of his big agendas, and it's terrifying to see what's happening across the country."

The new film tackles the complicated nature of drug addiction and recovery.

"It's a n epidemic," he added. "I think, even in a small way, a film like this can get some awareness out there."

In the film, Chalamet's Nic seems to be trapped in a constant cycle of relapsing, despite making so many strides and even staying clean for more than a year at one point. While Carell admitted that he didn't know a lot about methamphetamine going into the project, he was surprised to learn about how much the drug alters brain chemistry and "reduces your capacity for rational thought."

"It makes it that much more difficult to get out of the throes of it," Carell said. "It's such an insidious drug — as they all are — but meth is especially so."

In addition to its portrayal of an addict's struggle with recovery, Carell felt that it was important for "Beautiful Boy" to show audiences an intimate look at how addiction isn't just a singular disease. It ravages the lives of an addict's family and friends as well.

"It is important to get a balance of both sides," Carell said. "It's destroying a lot of people at the same time."

How to pay for college when you haven't saved enough

NerdWallet is a personal finance website.

If college tuition bills are looming and you don't have nearly enough saved, you have plenty of company. But you also have options for making it more affordable.

Four out of 10 families who hope to send kids to college aren't saving for that goal, according to student loan company Sallie Mae. Among those who are, parents of children aged 13 to 17 have saved an average of $22,985.

That's not enough to pay for the typical college education out of pocket. The net average cost for a year of college, after scholarships and grants were deducted, was $15,367 in 2017, according to Sallie Mae. That means a four-year degree is likely to cost over $60,000. The expense can, of course, be much higher since many elite schools now charge $70,000 a year or more.

Here are some steps to take now to secure an affordable education — and avoid crushing debt.

Set borrowing limits

The federal PLUS loan program allows parents to borrow the full price of virtually any college education. That's rarely a good idea. It's much smarter to decide before applying for schools how much parents can and want to contribute. In general, parents should limit borrowing to what they can afford to pay off before retirement, while still being able to save for that retirement.

It's also reasonable to ask the student to first exhaust federal loan options before parents consider borrowing. Students typically can borrow up to $5,500 in federal student loans for their first year and a total of $31,000 for an undergraduate education.

Apply to financial "safety," "target" and "reach" schools

College counselors typically recommend applying for three types of schools, based on the student's academic credentials: "safety" schools virtually certain to say yes, "target" colleges likely to accept them, and "reach" options where acceptance is a long shot.

Families also should also include at least one financial "safety" school — a college with costs they know they can handle — as well as "target" schools that could be affordable and a "reach" school that may surprise them with generous financial aid. The net price calculators available on every college's site can help identify likely candidates.

Consider alternatives

Not every career requires a four-year degree. For those that do, a year or two of community college can significantly cut costs but also may increase a student's risk of dropping out. Community college may be best for self-motivated types who are determined to get a degree and who can do the legwork in advance to ensure their credits will transfer to the desired four-year institution.

For kids who aren't that motivated or are unsure what they want to study, a gap year may be a good option. They'll have another year to grow up and get focused, without racking up college expenses. They could even get a job to pay some of those costs.

Speaking of motivation ... encourage focus

It's a lot to ask 17- and 18-year-olds to decide what they want to do for the rest of their lives. Dithering is expensive, though. Most colleges have career counselors who can help students sort through their options, and internships can offer real-world glimpses of future career paths.

Chris Sale will get the start for the Red Sox in Game 1 of the World Series at Fenway Tuesday night. GETTY IMAGES

Sox confident in Sale for Game 1

The Red Sox ace is full steam ahead for the World Series against the Dodgers.

MATT BURKE
matthew.burke@metro.us

Someday maybe we'll find out the real reason Chris Sale was hospitalized at MGH last week. It could be that Sale really did have a stomach illness and had to stay overnight because of it. Simple as that.

But this whole thing has been mighty confusing.

Sale sent many a media folk and many a curious Red Sox fan into a tizzy this past weekend when he said he was hospitalized because of an infection he got from a belly button ring. He deadpanned it, and most bought his belly button story initially. Turns out he was just kidding.

Whether it was the belly button ring or an expired piece of chicken, it's in the past now — according to the Red Sox. They survived the ALCS with Sale only having pitched four innings, and he is full steam ahead for Game 1 of the World Series against the Dodgers on Tuesday.

"We can't wait," Sale told WEEI. "This is what we worked hard for all year, to play in the World Series. You show up to spring training, that's the goal. That's what we talked about all year. From Day 1, everyone in here — AC (Alex Cora), the coaching staff — has talked about getting to the World Series. We're all excited. You can talk to everybody in here. We've all grinded. Worked hard. We're here and have an opportunity to win the last game of the year and that's as good as it gets."

Odd as it may be, Red Sox fans are probably just as confident right now that David Price will throw a good game as they are in Sale. Sale was on a pitch count throughout the month of September and looked shaky. The lanky lefty was phenomenal in the ALDS against the Yankees, pitching a total of 6.1 innings and 106 pitches in two appearances while allowing just five hits and two earned runs.

But things fell apart in Game 1 against the Astros as Sale's velocity was down and he was uncharacteristically wild. He walked four batters in his lone appearance in the series, coughing up a pair of runs in a game the Sox wound up losing, 7-2.

On the surface, the Red Sox at least seem as though the elite version of Sale — the one that struck out 237 batters and had a 2.11 ERA during the regular season — will be making the start at Fenway Tuesday night.

"He's good to go. I think everything works out for a reason. Game 5 [of the ALCS] happened and he gets a few more off days so he can take care of his belly button," Cora said, tongue-in-cheek. "He'll be ready to go."

Aries Emotions will escalate if you aren't careful. You are best off not sharing your thoughts and feelings with co-workers or anyone who may want to make you look bad.

Taurus Don't let erratic behavior or someone's inconsistency cost you. Know what you want and take care of business yourself. Leave nothing to chance if you want to make progress.

Gemini Be aware of others' actions and wants, and how you can best help them. Make your position clear, your concerns known and your promises realistic.

Cancer Moodiness will defeat you if you can't walk away from someone or something aggravating. Knowing when to move on will lead to better days ahead.

Leo Don't let anger take the reins. You will do much better if you keep a low profile and don't stir up a situation that needs time to settle. Keep the peace

Virgo Get involved, bring about change and mingle with people who share your interests. A positive change is in the works; all you have to do is show up and take part.

Libra Take a look at your options, and discuss your plans with an expert. The advice offered may not be what you want to hear, but it should be considered.

Scorpio Look out for someone who needs some help. There is no point getting angry over something you cannot change. If you do your best, things will take a positive turn.

Sagittarius Clearing space at home for a project you want to pursue will motivate you to get moving. An unanticipated opportunity will lead to positive change.

Capricorn Take a moment to prepare for what you want to do next. A personal change will give you a push to get rid of items you no longer need.

Aquarius Stick to the people and things you know you can trust. Steer clear of anyone trying to tempt you to indulge in something that is expensive or unhealthy. Focus on proper diet and exercise.

Pisces Protect your reputation by living up to your promises. Money or an interesting proposal will come your way from an unusual source. A physical change you make will create interest. EUGENIA LAST
